Invest in Healing: Support Transformative Therapies for Behavioral Health

- Animal-assisted therapy (AAT) is beneficial for individuals who have experienced trauma, including those diagnosed with posttraumatic stress disorder and schizophrenia. AAT contributes to enhanced emotional well-being, reduced anxiety, and decreased stress levels.
- Music therapy improves depressive symptoms, decreases anxiety, and improves functioning for people with a variety of mental health conditions. Music interventions focus on symptom management, foster relationships with peers and therapists, and provide psychosocial support and education to augment hope, meaning, purpose, and recovery.
- Art therapy refers to various treatments, such as theatre therapy, dance movement psychotherapy, body psychotherapy, drawing, painting, and craft therapy. Art therapy can help patients express themselves more freely, improve their mental health, and improve interpersonal relationships.

Trained visiting animals bring joy and calm to behavioral patients facing uncertainty and change.

“When I first arrived, I was scared and unsure of what to expect. Then the therapy dog visited. He made me feel calm. I wish that dog would visit more.”
